1. The programme offers three streams. What are they and how can I choose them?

   The HKU Master of Finance (MFin) programme offers three streams: corporate finance, financial engineering and risk management. Students can choose to concentrate in one of the streams or take double concentration, according to their interests and career aspirations.

2. What are the benefits of choosing double concentration?

   The main benefit of choosing double concentration is that it enriches student learning and training experiences by allowing them to focus on two areas of expertise and hence a wider choice in their career.

3. Would there be any practical skills linking back to the industry?

   MFin programme is an interdisciplinary programme aiming to provide motivated individuals with not only cutting-edge training in financial theory, but also the necessary STEM training, allowing them to apply the knowledge in a multitude of financial disciplines: asset and wealth management, corporate finance, financial engineering, and risk management. Students apply the techniques and knowledge to analyze business cases and conduct group projects. The cutting-edge curriculum balances quantitative skills and visionary thinking, and is further enriched by alumni and student activities, mentorship programmes, student clubs and professional seminars.

I enjoyed that many classes in the programme includes project and group work. This helped me enhance my team working skills, meet new people and learn how students from different cultural and academic backgrounds approach tasks in a different way.

My second class was the Investment Analysis and Portfolio Management class taught by the programme director Dr. Meng. The teaching challenge, where we managed a portfolio over several weeks, was one of the highlights of the course and gave students a hands-on experience in how to trade in the global financial markets.

I would say the programme can be described as highly focused on technical skills with a few practical insights.

The Master of Finance programme at HKU Business School is designed to provide students with a rigorous and comprehensive training in finance. The programme covers a wide range of topics, including financial theory, financial markets, investments, risk management, and financial regulation. Also, the faculty members of the programme are renowned experts in their fields, with many of them having extensive experience in the finance industry. They bring a wealth of knowledge and expertise to the classroom, and are dedicated to providing students with a top-notch education.

I am truly grateful to HKU for offering me a wonderful experience during my pursuit of a master's degree. Through workshops and discussions with the professors and career service, I have had the opportunity to network with like-minded students and potential employers, and I am more confident in my career path in the financial industry in Hong Kong. I have a clear career direction now that best suits my strengths and interests, instead of blindly pursuing the heated positions that everyone wants.
